wedding was in the spacious and beautifully decorated pariors. Rev. Charles R. Stribling, of the Presbyterian Church, of Waynesboro, Va., an uncle of the Broom, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. M. Fraser, of the First Presbyterian Church, of this city performed the ceremony before a large altar elaborately bedecked in chrysanthemums and ferns, over which fell a soft glow of candle light.

The bridal party entered the room to the sweet strains of Lohenstin's wedding march, played by the Stonewall Orchestra, under the direction of Professor Brereton, and during the service Schubert's Screnade was rendered.

The plan of the wedding was out of the usual order, as there was no best man, and the two ushers, Mr. Harry Warden Bowling, brother of the bride, and Mr. Gordon Armstrong, brother of the groom, came first, forming an aisle with ropes of white ribbon and taking their positions on either side of the altar. Next entered the maid of honor, Miss Daisy Yarbrough, handsomely gowned in white silk and carrying a bouquet of maidenhalr fern. Fellowing came the bride, accompanied by the groom.

Her gown was a beautiful creation of white panne crepe de chine, over white taffeta, trimmed in old lace. She were a vell and carried a shower bouquet of veil and carried a shower bouquet of liles of the valley.

The bride is a descendent of one of Virginia's oldest families, and in the social life of Staunton she is very popular in the younger set.

The groom is a son of Dr. and Mrs. William Dillon Armstrong, formerly of Salem, Va., but now of Staunton, and is one of the leading physicians of this

N. C. Miss Sanford has been in bad health nearly during the whole year, but a few weeks ago was able to resume her part of the household duties. Yesterday after dinner she started to visit a neighbor, Mrs. John Puryear, Ilving about half a mile from her home. Not returning at supper, some of her younger brothers went after her, but found that she had not been there. Inquiry was made at some other neighbors, but no trace could be found. An alarm was given and a search was started, and has been kept up to the time that this is written without any result.

No motive can be ascribed for the young lady's leaving home. Some colored people were hunting in the neighborhood, but one of them, in spite of the fact that he had rabbits for dinner today, denies that he was hunting.

The search is still kept up and a large posse from our town took part in it last night, and others are assisting in the search to-day.

NEW STATIONERY

Every season the paper makers turn out some new conceits in stationery. Some novel tint, or original shape, or maybe a paper whose texture is decidedly new.

Just as soon as these leave the factories, we get them—get them with the freshness of the makers still on them. People who like originality in their correspondence will do well to come to HUNTER'S. Our paper at 25c, the pound is simply splendld in quality, and mighty economical in price; 170 sheets of paper in a pound, 25c, Can yau match it?
